Dear Readers.

Welcome to the October edition of Local Links.

It's great to see so many of our repeat advertisers. We hope you will continue to support local businesses during this difficult economical period.

We know that the usual celebrations that take place this time of year won't quite be the same, but that doesn't mean that children (or adults!) have to miss out. We have some Covid-friendly ideas for Halloween night that we think you will love, as well as the perfect recipe for the season; cinder toffee. This honeycomb delight is fun to make and kids will love it!

Our competition this month is courtesy of The Boars Head in Sudbury; the perfect rural location to enjoy a cosy meal or drinks. We have six (yes six!) vouchers to give away, so make sure you enter!

Have a safe and happy Halloween and Bonfire Night everyone!

KNOW YOUR POTATOESI

id you know that there are over five hundred varieties of potato grown worldwide?! That's right, and there are fifteen varieties that we're much more likely to find in the UK. This is our short guide to help you understand these varieties and how best to use each one.

The two most common factors which determine a potato's best uses are waxiness and starchiness. Starchy refers to starch content, waxy refers to the texture. A starchy potato has a more floury texture and a waxy potato has a higher water content. Starchy potatoes will break up easily when cooked, and absorb flavours well. This makes them well suited to mash, potato cakes, hashes, and even curries, where you'd like them to soak up some of the sauce. They have a lovely fluffy texture inside when roasted. Waxy potatoes hold together much better when cooked so are suitable for salads and other dishes where you want to keep the potato whole. They can withstand a good boiling! There are also all-purpose varieties, which do exactly what they say on the tin. Or sack.

We are not saying that you can't make some delicious mashed potatoes with an Elfe or boil a Vivaldi, but hopefully this has helped in the potatochoosing process and in your quest to create amazing roasties!

IS HALLOWEEN CANCELLED? BY SARAH DAVEY

rick-or-treat is either a fun chance to dressup and claim free sweets from neighbours, or it's an antisocial American travesty which has infiltrated these shores. I happen to fall squarely in the latter camp, my kids the former. They start planning their outfits in March. I don't want to rain on their scary parades, but what should we do about Halloween in the face of a global pandemic?

It's not certain that any of our neighbours will actually welcome my young visitors (or plague-bearers as I've come to think of them of them since their return to school) to their doorsteps, no matter how cute their costumes or beguiling their manners.

Frankly, I'd freak out about them grabbing handfuls of potentially COVID- coated Crunchie bars, so I'm not exactly devastated that I won't have to accompany them door-to-door and smile apologetically as they beg for treats. But neither am I a total killjoy, so I've come up with some ideas for alternative activities:

- Hang a spooky piñata for your children in your own back garden.
- 2. Create a haunted house for your kids at home. Let them dress up and be scared in a fun but safe way.
- Create a spooky scavenger hunt inside and out. Leave clues, or a trail of blood, or spiders.

- Snuggle up and watch a scary movie...something like Monsters Inc or The Corpse Bride (depending on age).
- 5. Read age-appropriate ghost stories in the dark in front of the fire.
- 6. If the weather is mild, go outside, snuggle under blankets, light pumpkins and toast marshmallows on a camping stove or fire pit. Now, that's the sort of trick-or-treat night I could get behind!

I suppose we should also leave a bowl of Quality Street and bottle of hand sanitiser on the doorstep and wave at the hardcore trick-ortreaters from the safety of the upstairs window.

Whatever you decide, have a Happy COVID-safe Halloween!

PUMPKINS: NOT JUST FOR HALLOWEEN BY CASSIDY FERRARI

very October thousands of pumpkins are sold to be displayed proudly on our doorsteps Halloween, carved into ever more creative shapes and patterns. Every year we also see a rise in recipes which encourage us to save the sweet flesh and seeds from the bin, adding them to traditional pies and tarts or more experimental dishes. We set out with the best intentions to make one of these fantastic dishes, but often end up leaving the pumpkin sitting on the side until the last minute. The carving ends up taking longer than we thought, we don't have a sharp enough knife, the mouth goes all wonky.. By the time this ordeal is over we're ready to forget all about pumpkins for another year.

We're here to say this year can be different! With a little preparation you can have a painless pumpkin experience, and have simple recipes ready to go that you can either have for dinner on Halloween night itself or at a later date.

ROASTING

If you're looking for the simplest way to incorporate pumpkin into a meal, you can't go wrong with roasting the flesh. If you're not carving the skin then you can slice it up as it comes, cut out the stringy area with the seeds, and put it straight in the oven at 200c with a little oil drizzled over. You can then cut away the skin with ease once it's been roasted.

If you're saving the flesh after carving it, try to use a sharp implement for removal as it'll be easier to create bigger and more uniform chunks.

To further enhance the flavour you can add a dusting of brown sugar, ground clove, cinnamon, nutmeg, and a little sea salt. It'll take around 18-20 minutes in the oven.

SOUPS AND STEWS

These are a great option if you're likely to be taking out a pumpkin's innards without much precision. The flesh will keep in the fridge for up to three days, or up to eight months in the freezer, so vou can save more timeconsuming recipes for a less busy evening. You can then add your pumpkin to your favourite stew or curry recipes as you would butternut squash, as it will behave very similarly and add a fresh and sweet taste. Or you can make it the star of the show in a hearty pumpkin soup. This can be as simple as cooking off onions, garlic, and your choice of spices before adding the pumpkin and some stock, then leaving on the hob until everything is creamy and ready to go.

SEEDS

forgotten, Not to be pumpkin seeds are very easy to prepare as a snack or to sprinkle on top of your soups and stews. You can either roast them in the oven, or heat in a pan with a little oil until they pop, and they're easy to jazz up with spices if you'd like to try something different. Either way - they are full of a surprising amount of nutrients for such a small snack.

BY THE BARN BY ANGELA SARGENT

ctober brings early nights and darker mornings and, for us, the beginning of feeding silage to our cattle still outside. A few frosty mornings are always a pleasure but not so much the foggy ones as it makes checking livestock difficult. As soon as they hear the tractor start up, the cattle are poised and waiting by the electric fence, all trying to be first to have the best pickings.

We are just finishing off the field work - growing less than previous years and more grass instead. Our fields are mucked with our own animal's manure and our sheds are emptied and cleaned in readiness for when the cattle come in again for winter.

When the seed has been sown or drilled, the biggest job is keeping the pigeons and crows off the young sprouts as they come through. We use scarecrows (a good way of getting rid of old work clothes!) and occasionally bangers. Some farmers use automated bird Years ago, hubby used a string of scarer bangers tied onto the scarecrow (he thought it would be double the effect!). It certainly scared the birds as the first shot ignited the scarecrow, which in turn set off the rest all at once! A case of more bang for your buck!

We have to be careful as to the amount of nitrogen (in the form of manure/fertiliser) we put on our land to prevent excess run-off into any watercourses. We have no arable fields next to any streams and we also have wide field margins next to ditches just to make sure that there is no contamination risk.

Money spider webs may be seen wafting and glistening with dew on the grass, particularly on frosty mornings, and luckily we will see last of the yellow ragwort flowers for this year.

SAFER GAMBLING WEEK

he 19th to 25th November is Safer Gambling Week, an initiative to promote safer gambling in the United Kingdom and Ireland. The aim is to create awareness of, and advise on:

- How to gamble more safely
- The tools that are available to help you gamble safely all year round
- Sources of more advice and support

The whole of the UK and Irish gambling industry including amusement arcades, bingo clubs, bookmakers and casinos has come together to support the initiative, with many events and workshops taking place across the country and online.

If you are concerned about your gambling habits, please call the National Gambling Helpline on 0808 8020 133. To find out more about Safer Gambling Week or to get involved, visit www.safergamblinguk.org.

SECOND-HAND, NOT SECOND BEST! BY TRACEY ANDERSON

T owadays we can anything we buy like new online or in department stores. So why purchase anything secondhand? Well, the problem with everyone shopping in the same stores is that everyone's home begins to look a bit like identikit furnishing or 'home designbv-numbers.' Then there's the issue of landfill. Finally. second-hand means get to choose something different, quirky and unique to you.

PAINTINGS

It's easy to pop into IKEA and buy a nice printed canvas, but buying an original vintage oil painting is significantly more worth it. Most people think 'Rembrandt' or 'Monet' if you mention oil paintings but there are many lovely affordable original works of art or vintage prints on offer, and who knows, you might even happen to come upon an undiscovered old master!

ANTIQUE RUGS

These are another good purchase and can set the tone of an entire space. Look in antique markets for Oushaks and Serapis style rugs. They use higher quality wool, have a softer texture and blend with modern or antique furniture. They also tend to appreciate in value with age. Look for quality craftsmanship, no sun damage, and no smoke and pet odours. An older rug should be worn evenly.

LEATHER CLUB CHAIRS

Leather club chairs will always be a good purchase. Look for original leather or one recovered with vintage leather. Distressed leather is lovely and adds character but avoid chairs with a lot of peeling or cracking, and, unless it is for decorative purposes only, check the support it offers!

CERAMIC WARES

I break plates and cups with alarming regularity, so much so that I gave up on matching dinner services many years ago. Instead I buy pretty individual vintage pieces I like. The mix 'n' match look is eclectic but works for me and my family. Vintage doesn't necessarily mean expensive, but if you are more careful than I am go for it. Look for patina, shape, and design to indicate whether an article is genuine.

MIRRORS

Mirrors are some of the best items to buy vintage or antique. There are a wide range of styles in good condition that can add a touch of history or character to a room. An original mirror edged with silver or gold, even if it is distressed, is so much more interesting than anything bought new. Old mirrors may have distortions or bubbles in the glass so are best placed where decorative or increasing light and space is more important than having a functional mirror!

Buying second-hand can be fun, let you express your individual personality, save money and the planet. What could be better?

RECIPE: CINDER TOFFEE

Part science experiment, part sweet treat. This is fun for the kids and perfect for Halloween and Bonfire Night.

PREPARATION TIME

5 minutes

COOKING TIME

15-20 minutes (plus cooling).

SERVES: Depends how sweet your tooth is!

165g demerara sugar

165g caster sugar

60ml golden syrup

4 tbsp water

15g butter, diced, plus extra to grease

Pinch of salt

1 tbsp bicarbonate of soda

*You will also need a kitchen thermometer

INSTRUCTIONS

- 1. Generously grease an approximately 24cm square tin.
- 2. Put the bicarbonate of soda within easy reach of the hob.
- 3. Place both sugars, syrup, water, and butter in a deep, heavy-bottomed pan with a pinch of salt. (Make sure it is a deep pan or the 'science bit' will go horribly badly!).
- 4. Heat gently, stirring, until the sugars and butter have dissolved,

- then turn up the heat slightly and bring to the boil. Simmer until it reaches 138C turns amber and bubbles this will take about 10-15 minutes.
- 5. When the mixture gets to temperature, remove it from the heat and quickly and thoroughly whisk in the bicarb. It will foam and grow alarmingly. The kids will love it!
- 6. Pour the foamy mixture into the tin and leave to set. When cold get the kids to smash it into pieces.

Optional: Pour melted chocolate over the shards for the ultimate cinder toffee treat.

SLEEP: QUALITY OR QUANTITY? BY MAGGIE MCKEOWN

uring lockdown, my sleep suffered. Like everyone else my anxiety levels rocketed, and I tossed and turned for hours. I dug out my Fitbit which I hadn't worn since the start of lockdown and began tracking my sleep again. I realised that my sleep score which had previously been 87-92 (good-excellent), was now languishing around 61-64 (bottom end of fair), occasionally dipping into the 50s (poor). No wonder I felt tired and tearful. Something needed to change.

To optimise sleep health, we need to balance how long we sleep with how well we sleep. For years, researchers recommended eight hours of sleep each night as optimal. Now, professionals consider sleep quality to be of equal importance in reaping all the benefits of sleep. In fact, sleep quality is probably a better indicator of overall mental health, mood, and energy levels than sleep quantity. Prior to lockdown, I'd been a 10:30pm-6am sleeper, occasionally 11pm-6:30am. Although that was 30 minutes shy of the perfect 8 hours, I always woke just before my alarm, feeling rested. During lockdown, bedtimes had become later and later, and although I was 'sleeping' for longer, and not setting the alarm, my sleep was clearly not of the quality I was used to.

Fitness trackers like the Fitbit monitor the quality of our sleep by looking at how much time we spend in the various stages. We cycle through the various stages each night and we each have a unique cycle. During light sleep, our body unwinds and relaxes. This is always the first stage of sleep and we spend most of our time asleep in it. It's important to our mental and physical health that we get enough light sleep. Deep sleep typically occurs within the first few hours of sleep. Our breathing is slower, our muscles relax fully and we're harder to wake during this stage. Typically, we spend about 13% of our night in deep sleep, and this is when our body repairs itself. Deep sleep aids learning, memory, and it supports our immune system. Finally, REM (rapid eve movement) sleep is when we dream. Our heart rate increases and our breathing becomes more irregular. We also experience a form of paralysis (so we don't start acting out our dreams!). REM sleep is important for mood regulation, learning and memory. It's when our brains process and consolidate our experiences from the day.

A regular bedtime is an important factor in sleep quality. Avoiding stimulants such as blue light from electronic devices or the caffeine in coffee are also a factor, as is making sure get enough gentle exercise during the day. I decided to take an hourlong walk every day and moved my bedtime back to 10:30pm. I avoided checking my phone for 30 minutes before bed and didn't drink coffee after 7pm. I noticed improvements almost immediately, and within a week my sleep had moreor-less reset to normal. Within a fortnight, my sleep score was back up in the 80s and hasn't dropped since.

If you're feeling stressed and tired or are struggling with low mood, it's worth looking at both the quality and quantity of your sleep.

SALVAGE THE BONES BY JESMYN WARD

It was a storm that made headlines around the world. In August 2005, Katrina hit the Louisiana coast causing great loss of life and destruction to New Orleans and the surrounding area. This award-winning novel, set over a period of 12 days, tells the story of the Batiste family who live in the fictional town of Bois Sauvage.

Esch is 15 years old and lives with her three brothers and their father. Isolated from the rest of the small town due to the location of their house, they live in extreme poverty, with a largely absent father who, seven years after the death of his wife, still relies on drink to get through the day. So, with the news of a category 5 storm about to hit, they begin to prepare what they can and stockpile a small amount of food.

Each chapter is one day in the build-up to the storm. Randall, the eldest, is trying to do what he can to hold his family together. Skeetah is preoccupied with his pit bull fighting dog, China, who has just given birth to puppies. Junior, the youngest, is trying to hold his own against his older brothers, and Esch has just discovered that she is pregnant.

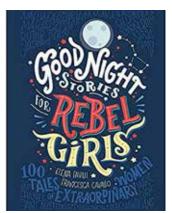

A captivating story with engaging characters, immerses you in their world. illustrated by a touch of mythology to a book that Esch (the narrator) is reading school. penultimate The chapter will have your heart racing but ultimately this is the story of family love that survives, despite poverty and deprivation.

GOODNIGHT STORIES FOR REBEL GIRLS BY ELENA FAVILLI & FRANCESCA CAVALLO

Not a traditional novel here but definitely worth a read. This incredibly popular book (which has sparked a second volume) presents the stories of 100 amazing women who have made contributions to society. It is aimed at telling girls that they can achieve anything that they put their mind to and that their gender should not hold them back. It challenges female stereotypes and inspires girls to aim high in their career choices.

Each story is told on a single page along with an illustration of the woman - this simple format gives fantastic introduction to their lives From mathematicians like Ada Lovelace (who actually built a machine and wrote the first computer programme back in the 19th century) to authors like the Bronte Sisters who defied the expectations their of patriarchal society. There are also tales of astronomers, activists, lawyers, chefs, naturalists. journalists, motocross racers, and even a tattoo artist.

Following the huge success of this book, a version aimed at boys has also been written: Stories for Boys Who Dare to be Different, which challenges male stereotypes that say you have to be tough in order to succeed.

ife was different in those days. Traditional roles were defined. expectations were to marry young, the wife leaving work when children arrived and the husband the breadwinner until the children were well established at school. Outside support was limited, there were some nursery classes for 3-5 year olds, but not the choices we have today for babies. No maternity leave, so if Granny could not care for the children, women had no choice but be a 'stay at home mum.'

It's the 'Mummy' word.

I feel as if I am going mad. The voices heard by Joan of Arc are nothing compared with the ones in me screaming to get out. If I hear that name called once more, I feel sure I shall go over the edge.

'Mummy.' It sounded so wonderful when it was first uttered. But that was two and a half years ago - now it fills me with despair. Emma is very demanding, but why does it always have to be me? Just then the baby wakes up. 'Mmmee, Mmmee' he calls. Even he has started. At least when Emma was 10 months old she started with daddy.

But not this one.

I was very content at first. The house, once tidied, stayed tidy. I knew where she was and what she was doing. But not now. Now she has boundless energy, does not concentrate for more than two minutes and is flitting from place to place. Flitting did I say? Thundering is more like it.

Silence spells disaster.

I had been engrossed in a job one day when suspicion leapt to the fore. Emma was quiet. She came downstairs wide-eyed looking and innocent. 'What have you been doing?' I inquired suspiciously. 'Don't know' was the reply. This invariably means 'I don't want to tell you'. Noting a tell-tale pink stain on her dress, I accused 'you've been at the nappy cream in Adam's room, haven't you?' Horrified that I should wrongly accuse, she jumped to her own defence

'No I haven't. It's yours.'

'We don't play with cream do we?'

'No' agreed Emma, 'we look at books.'

I love books and I try to distract her with a selection suitable for her age. Fortunately, she enjoys this activity. Sometimes my mind is crying out to read a novel when I find myself reading the same simple sentences again and again. It gets to you after a while. One night I awoke in the early hours and couldn't get back to sleep again. Running through my mind was 'John had great big waterproof boots on...John had a great big waterproof hat...' Why wouldn't these phrases go away and leave me in peace to sleep?'

Then, all sleep forgotten, I heard my sleeping husband muttering beside me.

'James, James...Morrison, Morrison...Weatherby George Dupree...'

A. A. Milne had won.

I smiled and fell asleep. I couldn't wait for morning - and Emma - to dawn.

REMEMBER REMEMBER, THE 5TH OF NOVEMBER

by Scarsdale Vets

Firework season can be an extremely stressful time for our pets.

On average, 49% of dogs suffer from firework or noise phobias in the UK and once the phobia has developed it tends to get worse each year.

COMMON SIGNS OF NOISE PHOBIA

- Hiding or trying to find an area to hide
- Trying to escape digging, running away
- · Urinating or defecating
- Shaking
- · Pacing
- Panting
- Not eating
- Barking
- Drooling
- Chewing

WAYS IN WHICH YOU CAN HELP

- Provide a den: create your pet a 'safe haven' where they can retreat to and hide. One way to create an area is by using a crate covered with a thick blanket. If your dog already has an area they use to hide, make that area extra comfortable with blankets and a comfy bed. Also cover the area with a blanket.
- Maintain your normal routine and act normal around the dog as much as possible. Stay calm. Try and be mindful of the response you give to your dog if they are scared - telling them off can make your dog worse. Comfort your dog if they want your reassurance, but do not force it on them.
- Feed a high carbohydrate meal early evening before the fireworks start; this could be sweet potato mash, brown pasta or rice.
- Walk only in the daytime; a well exercised dog will be less reactive. Try not to walk at dusk or after dark; no walk is better - than a walk where there are fireworks going off.

- Close all curtains and consider using thick blackout curtains on main windows and doors.
- Turn up the tv or radio to muffle some of the firework sounds.
- Consider using interactive toys to mentally stimulate your dog during the day and while the fireworks are going off. These could include Kong toys or a snuffle mat.
- Give your dog the opportunity to chew. Chewing in dogs can be very stress relieving.
- Consider using an Adaptil plug-in.
- Ask your veterinary surgeon for medications that can help your dog cope better.
